

FOUNDERS' DAY WAS CELEBRATED

Eleven Hundred Students Participate in Commemorative Exercises at L. D. S. U.

TWENTY-THREE YEARS AGO

Founders Tell of Experiences Connected With the Beginning of the School in Social Hall.

Founders' day of the L. D. S. university was fittingly observed today, the principal exercises being held in Barratt hall. There were 1,100 students present, many of their parents, members of the faculty and Church authorities. Probably never before in the history of the great institution of learning has there been such a spirit of enthusiasm, loyalty and encouragement manifested as in today's exercises.

The program began at 9 o'clock this morning, when the 1,100 students, headed by the band, marched to the various places where the institution was formerly housed. To the strains of lively marches, with college and class yells, with streaming banners and shouts of joy, the students visited, in their historical march, the old Ellerslie house on First North, between First and Second West streets. From there they marched to the Templeton building, then to the old Social hall, where the school was founded 23 years ago. They then went to the Lion House and finally to the magnificent buildings now constituting the home of the university.

Barratt hall was beautifully decorated with the colors of blue and gold, with class colors, waving banners and flowers. The band led the march to the hall and was followed by the preps, then the freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors. A seat in the hall was occupied and many were compelled to stand.

THE EXERCISES.

One of the most popular songs of the day was that sung by the seniors entitled: "We're the Class of Seniors, Hurray, Hurray, 'Tis Our 'My Wife's Gone to the Country." After a selection by the school, Joseph E. Taylor offered the opening prayer, followed by a selection by the orchestra, a well trained body of young musicians.

President Francis M. Lyman was introduced and waving a beautiful gold and blue flag, he presented it to the school.

"I regard it as a great pleasure," said President Lyman, "to be with you on this occasion, the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of this splendid institution. I present to you this beautiful flag with the hope that you will all abide by the principles of truth and light."

In a most speech Prof. B. S. Hinkle replied to the presentation and on behalf of the school accepted the beautiful gift.

"Back of us are 23 years of struggle and triumph," said the speaker.

"Thousands will march behind this banner and tens of thousands are marching toward it, but students more loyal than those present will never sign its praises."

The school sang "Hail to the Gold and Blue," and then Prof. Willard Done, the first teacher of the institution, delivered the main address. He spoke in part as follows:

"Every movement that is worthy and lasting has its origin in a splendid idea which finds lodgment in the brain of an active and aggressive man, and is put to practical application. The founding of this institution is no exception. The idea conceived by President Brigham Young, and carried into effect in the founding of the institutions that bear his name at Provo and Logan, appeared strongly to certain men in Salt Lake City in the year 1886. The idea was well expressed by one of these men, Wm. B. Douglas, in the following words: 'We send men to West Point in order that they may become educated soldiers, to Ann Arbor in order that they may become educated scholars. The government supports these institutions for this purpose. And it is just as necessary that we have educated Latter-day Saints, and that the Church support schools designed to produce them.'"

"With such men as Angus M. Cannon, Wm. B. Douglas, Wm. A. Rosier, Antonio E. Hyde, Francis Wm. H. Howe, Sigmond Chace, Rodney C. Hudger and others interested in this movement, to conceive an idea was to act upon it; and in the summer of the year named they went to work upon interest in the establishing of a church school in Salt Lake City. Money was freely donated by public spirited citizens, and negotiations were soon opened with Dr. Mauser, principal of the Brigham Young academy at Provo, looking to the founding of the institution. These negotiations resulted in his vigorously taking the matter in hand and assisting in the preliminary arrangements. He brought with him to take charge of the work the present speaker, who had just entered upon his third year as teacher in the academy at Provo. The basement of the Social hall was secured from President John Taylor largely through the influence of Brothers Douglas, Rosier and Hyde, and fitted up with the best furnishings obtainable at that date.

"The first day of school."

"Here, after full preliminaries were arranged, Dr. Mauser and I met the students on the first day of the school's existence, November 15, 1886. The experiences of that first day were unique. The establishment of the school was an innovation. The students were interested in the proceedings attending the organization of classes, etc., and a certain degree of surprise was manifested at some of the innovations. One of the boys was telling his friends about it afterward. 'We went into a place,' said he, 'that was a study school. Brother Mauser was there, and there was a boy who told me that he had seen a door and showed us in. I found out after that that he was our teacher. This was his delicate way of referring to me. The students were graded, three classes being found necessary in some subjects, and active work was commenced at once. I remember that during the first term, I had to conduct three different arithmetic classes during the same recitation period. The attendance ran up to about 75, and then we turned applicants away.'"

Prof. Done concluded by paying a high tribute to the student body, the faculty, the Church authorities and the wonderful strides that the school has made.

LOYALTY THE THEME.

After a selection by the glee club, Nephil L. Morris, one of the first students, delivered an interesting address on the subject of loyalty. He spoke of the first day of the institution and said: "If we had done in that old basement what we have done here, Prof. Done would have expelled every one of us. I can say words of praise for his patience and I wonder that he still is here."

Let us not forget one of the founders, the Church, let us show loyalty to the Church, loyalty to the principles taught in this splendid school so that you will become good and loyal citizens with reverence for country and obedience to its laws."

The school choir sang "Land of Freedom," and Joseph E. Taylor, one of the founders, spoke briefly upon the struggles of the early days of the school and the remarkable achievements obtained. Miss Irene V. Smith read an interesting paper, "Our School," and President Anthony H. Lund made a few earnest remarks on the moral, spiritual, mental and physical advantages obtained at the school. He complimented the students on the splendid showing made and spoke words of encouragement upon the good work. The benediction was pronounced by Angus M. Cannon.

Those present were urged to remain and partake of a luncheon prepared by the domestic science class and served by about 25 young women, who, in response to this call, went to the place and returned with Goring to the city prison, where he was placed in the emergency hospital. Dr. F. K. Steen, the police surgeon, was called in, and after Goring died two hours later. Dr. Steen signed a certificate to the effect that he had died of fracture of the skull, the base of the brain. The aged man had also sustained a terrible blow on the front part of the head, so that the skull was broken over the skull for several inches, leaving the bone of the skull exposed.

The police, Monday night, gave out the information which had been given to them by the landlady of the place, to the effect that the old man had registered at the Crescent rooming house, under the name of "Judge" Harper; that the landlady and other inmates of the place had seen him there for three days previous to the time of his injury; that he had occupied room 10; that he had fallen over the banisters from the third to the second floor.

SON MAKES INVESTIGATION.

Last Saturday, it was stated, after an investigation by young Goring and his friends, that the landlady had deliberately lied to the police and that the police had swallowed her story without making due investigation.

Chief Barlow had accepted the landlady's statements. The landlady last Saturday admitted that Goring had not registered under the name of "Judge" Harper; she stated that she had "made a mistake" in giving her first report of the circumstances to the police.

When Goring came in to the rooming house, that her "assistant," Maudie Darke, had assigned Goring to room 9, on the third floor, about 7 o'clock, Monday night, and that he had heard a noise, and on going out he found Goring lying at the bottom of the stairs, head down, with a pillow in his arms, and that his head was bleeding.

Justice of the Peace and Acting Coroner Hanks stated that he could not hold an inquest, because Dr. M. H. Stewart, the head of the board of health, had told him that he had made an investigation and that no further official action was necessary.

Edmund F. Goring, the son, visited the chief of police Saturday, after the latter had returned from a drunk hunting trip, and insisted that a thorough investigation be made, and that the police should compel the landlady of the Crescent rooming house and Maudie Darke to explain their conflicting statements regarding the case.

NO INVESTIGATION.

Chief of Police Barlow has made no personal investigation and has received the reports of the police, who had swallowed the landlady's story.

As this mysterious case stands now, Chief of Police Barlow refuses to take any action whatsoever. He says that Goring's death was an "accident." He does not explain the fact that the landlady had told him that Goring had been drunk in her house for three days previous to the "accident," which was false; that she said Goring had registered at "Judge" Harper, which was false; that Goring had occupied room 10, which was false.

Instead of trying to get at the truth of the matter, and unraveling the mystery, the chief of police simply connected with the case, Chief of Police Barlow ignored young Goring's demand for official action, and lightly dismissed the case.

CAUSE FOR DELAY.

Manager Daynes of the Daynes-Bec Music company received a letter this morning from the Columbian Record company at New York stating that the delay in sending the experts to Salt Lake to take the tabernacle organ and choir records, was caused by the delay in completing the specially devised machinery for housing the records.

However, shipment will be made this week. Regret is expressed that it could not have been here in time to take a record of the choir, organ and Sunday's band together in the tabernacle.

IMPROVING STATE STREET.

Workmen are removing the electric light wires from the poles on State street, beginning at South Temple, and working south. At the same time the trolley standards along the curb are being removed, and the support wires for the trolley, so that by the end of the month, an immense improvement will be noted in the appearance of the street. By the end of the year, there ought not to be a pole left in the street from Eagle Gate to Murray. The aerial telephone wires were all removed long ago, and communication made underground.

GORGING MYSTERY LEFT UNSOLVED

Police Department Accepts Story Of Landlady and Drops Investigation.

SON CHARGES MURDER.

Says His Father Did Not Fall Down Stairs, But Was Killed and Then Robbed.

In spite of the fact that Edmund F. Goring demanded a rigid official investigation into the circumstances surrounding the mysterious death of his father, Ernest E. Goring, who succumbed last Monday night to injuries received in the Crescent rooming house, 229 south state street, Chief of Police Barlow has refused to take any action in the matter, and the case has been dropped for good, as far as the police department is concerned.

Last Monday night, a hurry call was sent in to the police station from the rooming house, and the patrol wagon, in response to this call, went to the place and returned with Goring to the city prison, where he was placed in the emergency hospital. Dr. F. K. Steen, the police surgeon, was called in, and after Goring died two hours later. Dr. Steen signed a certificate to the effect that he had died of fracture of the skull, the base of the brain. THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

Mrs. Wilhelmina Dittmer, in Fit of Despondency, Commits Suicide Today.

IN DIVORCE COURT FRIDAY.

At That Time She Learned That Her Husband Had Been Freed by Court And Married Again.

Plunging into the cold and murky waters of a shallow pool between Ninth and Tenth West and Third and Fourth South streets shortly after noon today, Mrs. Wilhelmina C. Dittmer went to her death, a suicide, broken in health and despondent. Neighbors say that lately the unfortunate woman has manifested clearly a mental derangement. Throughout the morning reports were received at the police department of the woman's wanderings and the police tried several times to locate her, but without success.

Leaving her home this morning clad in a light dress and an old pair of shoes, she wandered aimlessly about telling those she met that she was going to kill herself and murmuring in a confused manner about her misfortunes. Shortly after 1 o'clock a fireman for the James Kennedy contracting firm informed the police that he had found a woman lying in a pool at the place mentioned. The patrol wagon hurried to the place, the man meanwhile working with the woman in an attempt to save her life. She died, however, just a few minutes before the patrol, with its horses lathered, dashed to the scene.

Mrs. Dittmer is the woman who last Tuesday applied to the district court for a divorce from her former husband, Edward R. Dittmer, not knowing that he had already obtained a divorce from her and that he had married another woman in this city, which proved to be the fact. The woman was his second wife. The case was continued last Friday for one week to permit an investigation as to the manner in which Dittmer obtained his divorce. Mrs. Dittmer, informed by the news by telephone that he had obtained his decree in regular manner and that after obtaining it he had contracted his second marriage. He is employed as a tailor in a local clothing house.

KNOWN NOTHING OF DIVORCE.

Mrs. Dittmer was German and unable to speak English. She said in her complaint that two years ago her husband took her to a lawyer's office and that she was asked a number of questions which were translated to her by her husband and he gave her answers to the attorney in English. She also signed a paper at that time, she says, and a month later Dittmer gave her $200 to purchase transportation to Germany, and she took her son with her. The decree obtained by Dittmer shows that there was a division of the property and that Mrs. Dittmer was given the custody of her son, who is 12 years old.

When Mrs. Dittmer signed the paper, she declared that her husband threatened to send her to jail and told her he wanted her to go back to Germany. She took the money which he gave her and returned to Germany. The immigration officials in Germany refused to allow her to remain in Germany because she was in ill health and dependent upon somebody for a living. Her son was admitted and joined the army. Mrs. Dittmer was sent back to the United States.

She alleged that when she arrived in Salt Lake she found her husband living with another woman. He refused to let her enter the house and for several months she had been living with friends. After she had been here the required length of time, she was advised to bring a suit for divorce and secure some support in the way of permanent alimony from her husband. She followed this advice only to learn that she had been divorced two years ago and that her husband was married again.

BUSINESS AND REALTY

The Tuttle Bros. company has sold to James J. Brissett, for a little over $200, 214 feet on State street, between Sixth and Seventh South streets. The purchaser is hauling 100,000 brick from the yards with which to erect there a building to contain a mining machinery shop in the rear, and a store in front. The same firm has sold for William Resnik to local parties not named, 49x165 ft. on the premises 727 State street, for $6,000 the purchase being for investment.

Property owners in the southeastern section of the city are entertaining high estimates as to the actual value of local residential property. On a little side street under the hill, Brownsville avenue, north of Tenth South street, for a one-story cottage, plainly built, and occupying a 25 ft. lot, the owner calmly asks $1,000. Would-be purchasers on learning the price, seem to be immediately deprived of the powers of speech, and seek an early change of air.

WOOL MUST BE CLEAN.

Members of the executive committee of the National Wool Warehouse Storage association, now in this city, say that notice is being given that hereafter, the wool sent in for shipment to Chicago must be perfectly clean. In years past there has been much complaint from consignees on account of dirt, sticks and other debris in the wools received by them from western shippers. One of the committee remarked today, that this sort of thing had been carried on an excess that in Australia would send a man to prison for engaging in it. Word has been given the jobbers at Chicago and elsewhere that clean wool is to be the regular thing from now on, and not the exception.
